Roark Capital Group and Wood Structures Inc. Acquire Weyerhaeuser's Boston Wood Products Distribution Center

Expands Wood Structures' engineered wood products distribution in New England

ATLANTA (December 11, 2007) – Roark Capital Group, an Atlanta-based private equity firm, has completed its acquisition of Weyerhaeuser's Distribution Center ("WDC"), located south of Boston in Assonet, Mass. WDC is a wholesale distributor of building products, with a specialization in engineered wood products. Weyerhaeuser's engineered wood products line, iLevel, is the market leader in product engineering, design, and distribution.

"We are proud to add Weyerhaeuser's top-rated iLevel product line to our offering," said Frank Paul, CEO of Wood Structures. "We look forward to providing ongoing exceptional service to customers of WDC and Wood Structures."

The operations of WDC have been acquired by a subsidiary of Wood Structures, Inc., a company owned by affiliates of Roark Capital. Based in Biddeford, Maine, Wood Structures is a manufacturer and designer of manufactured wood products, including roof trusses, floor trusses and wall panels, and distributor of engineered wood products, which are used in residential and commercial buildings.

"WDC is very complimentary to Wood Structures," said Lawrence J. DeAngelo, Managing Director at Roark. "This distribution center will allow Wood Structures to extend its geographical reach beyond its core markets into Western Massachusetts, Vermont, and Eastern New York. The acquisition will also play a significant role in our growth strategy."
